

THE SILENCE OF SNOW

The most reliable way for a blind woman to tell what the weather is doing is with her ears!

Well actually, I awoke to the sound of my cell phone beeping as a text came through from my friend and guide Jo, “Not walking. It’s snowing!”

I went to the bathroom in order to really check the snow out; that’s not where we keep our snow, but it is home to a window I can open to check what the weather is up to. I can hear the howling wind from this window, or the pounding rain and yes, even the silence of snow. It’s so peaceful when it snows. No traffic noise to interrupt the ears, just the quiet.

I love Dunedin in the snow!
